Background:

Reconstructing global health and social impact stems from the fact that CHD Group completes 10 years of existence in service of the nation. 10 years can be a long time in the journey of an institution, where in so much has been done and so much more left to do. We have covered the length and breadth of public health, from the hills of Wayanad, to the depths of Jammu, to the borders of Noklak, to the coast of Mangalore, 10 years has been a living dream with an impact of over 3 million lives and counting.

At this inflection point, we choose to reconstruct global health and social impact in a world that demands more, a world that calls for more and, in a world, where no dream is too big.

This event does not aspire to offer a complete resurgence on the craft of public health, but it surely does attempt to build a new narrative defined by passion and hope, fraternity and honesty.

In an age where war is a reality and anger the norm, practitioners of public health and social development need to rediscover grounds of hope. We need to learn from the lessons that we watch, see and experience, but we also need to learn from the lessons we don't easily know, but can only learn from each other.

The ECIPH dialogues is a story of courage, resilience and fortitude.

The 21st century began well with 189 governments signing the MDG and launched the most ambitious initiative to set right human misery. In 2024, we are collectively informed that we will miss the SDGs and are fairly off-track on our way to 2030.

We witness host of global health initiatives being executed in fragments and in isolation, our world face cascading risks and we remain in need of inspiration and hope.

Let us dream then, as practitioners of global health and sustainability, as fellow travelers sharing the same future, but enriched by different beliefs and convictions, each of us with our own voices towards a common destiny.

That's why this engagement matters, that's what makes our initiative different, that's why your presence adds value.

Join us this September to reconstruct the craft, to influence the game and to leave a legacy, not experienced before.
